

A transient laborer committed suicide Monday by hanging himself in an old barn near Jones' slough. The body was discovered by the party who does maintenance work on the state road. The man was at one time in the employ of Bert Limmesand, and was of a morose disposition, often talking of committing suicide.