Winsome Wit and Wisdom

This may be a fast age, but there was more bustle in days of yore—Thrift Magazine.

Some folks are too good to swear and have to slam doors to get the same results.—Anon

Funny little wriggly toes,
With a button for a nose;
Hardly fits at all in clothes,
That's brother.

Sweet and smiling all the day,
Fine at kissing hurts away;
Says that being mean won't pay
That's mother

Big and loud and lots of fun;
Calls me "Kid," Calls mother
"Hon" That's father

Smarty! Thinks she knows it all;

Dresses like a baby doll
Kisses her fella in the hall,
That's sister

Then there's me, well I ain't much.

Got a dog; his name is Dutch
Fine at chasin' cats an' such,
That's me.

— American Farming

The world steps aside and lets pass the man who knows where he's going. A person without a purpose is like a ship without a rudder.—Anon

"I see by the paper" how a farmer let old tin cans rust and decay in his orchard thus furnishing essential "iron" to the ground and materially increasing his fruit yield. From now on I suppose the goat will have to restrict his diet to whatever he can find on the clotheline.

All wish to know but few the price will pay.—Juvenal

One of the first signs of inexperience is thinking a thing's unusual because it never happened to you before.

When arguing with a fool be sure he's not doing the same thing.—Little Joe

Teacher: "Billy, if your father's car makes 20 miles on a gallon of gas and he bought 10 gallons how far could he drive?"
Billy: "Not an inch; mother drives our car!"

As writer of this column, "Banister Banter," I wish to thank all my readers for the great patience you must have had to read the column from week to week. I also thank Mr. Marrs for the space allotted to Banister Banter and the members of our school faculty who have offered me assistance. I sincerely hope whatever "Wit and Wisdom," I have written here may have been of some slight interest and entertainment to readers of the Sutton Reporter. Thanks folks and bye, bye! Our H. S. Philosopher
