W. J. Frederick Writes About Trip

Seattle, Washington, Oct. 16
To the Sutton Reporter

Dear Friends:
Well, as we promised, will write and tell you all about our trip west. Our first stop after leaving Sutton was at James-town, where we met Mr Paulson of Glenfield. After taking gas there we sped on until we reached Bismarek about 5:30. We put up at the tourist camp there and were glad to rest after riding in the heat all afternoon. The garage man there told us that the thermometer registered 115 in the shade at Dickinson that day.

Next day was cooler. We left Bismarek about 6:30, arriving at Glendive about 5:30 in the evening. The camp there was nice and we rested well. During the night it rained so we were in no hurry to leave next morning. We did however, start about 9:30.

We made the acquaintance of two tourist parties from Manitoba who were on their way to Vancouver B. C. while at Glendive. We found them real nice company, and as they had been over the trail before, told us all about the roads and the best route to follow. They usually led the way and we all stayed together, stopping at the same camps at night. We were one big family and thoroughly enjoyed their company.

While going through the Wonderlands we took several snapshots, our driver having a good camera. We also stopped at Medora and bought some trinkets, but we had no time to go through the De Mores chateau, although I most certainly wish we had. We picked up a number of pieces of petrified wood near Painted Canyon. The scenery there is simply wonderful; it can't be described.

After leaving Glendive we drove on until we arrived at Forsyth where we stayed all night, leaving about seven the next morning and going thru the towns of Bighorn, Custer and Pompey's Pillar where we took some more pictures. The next town was Huntley. We stopped at Billings which is a prosperous looking city. We then went through Laurel, Columbus, Big Timber and Springdale and stopped at Livingston.

At Bozeman we went through a tunnel of solid rock. Here we got out and took more pictures and rested a bit. Starting out again we went through Logan, Three Forks, White Hall, Spire Rock and Homestead Pass.

Our next stop was at Butte. It was very cold that night, in fact it snowed some, and the clothes I washed and put out, froze on the line. We were comfortable however, as we were furnished coal and the cabins we were in had good stoves. It was cold next morning, but we had a good supply of blankets which we wrapped about us. Later in the day it warmed up as we left the higher altitude.

We went through Stuart, Warm Springs, and at Deer Lodge we stopped. This town is a pretty place. Next were Garrison, Drummond and several small towns. Our next stop was at Missoula where we went to a cafe for lunch. This also is a beautiful town. After resting, taking gas and oil we drove on, passing several small towns, and about 5:30 we arrived at St. Regis. The camps there are all new, made of logs. It was the nicest camp we had seen on our trip so we decided to stay there for the night.

Next morning we left about 6:30. It was a frosty morning too. I tried to wash the windshield on the car but the water froze so I gave it up.

We stopped, all of our party of three cars, at the Camel's Hump and took more snapshots. This altitude is 3800 feet above sea level. Our next stop was at Lookout Pass, just at the line between Montana and Idaho.

Mullan Idaho was our next stop. From there we went on through Wallace, Kellogg and other towns. At Fourth of July Summit we took more pictures. This is another high mountain peak. From there we went on through Coeur D'Alene and Post Falls. After leaving the latter town we came into the state of Washington again, going from there to Spokane where we stopped to buy a new tire and to mend the spare tire. From Spokane we drove on until we got to Ritzville where we spent the night, leaving there early next morning.

At Pasco we crossed a toll bridge and our next stop was at the Columbia river where we crossed on a ferry to Umatilla Oregon. We followed the Columbia river all day, the trail being routed that way, and arrived at Portland just one week from the Sunday we left Sutton. We visited Mrs. Frederick's brother and family until Tuesday morning when we left, arriving at Seattle about 5:15 Tuesday afternoon.

In all we traveled 1895 miles averaging 239 per day. We had two blowouts, so bought two new tires. Our trip cost us, including all our expenses, tires, gas and oil and our living expenses only $130, so that was reasonable. We came through without a scratch or a mar on our car. We thoroughly enjoyed our trip. The mountain roads
