

Harry Kolpin is laid up with a broken leg. He had gone on horseback to his mail box Wednesday evening, and the ground being icy the horse fell, pinning his leg under it. The box is a short distance south of John Christianson's and Mr. Kolpin tried to call them to come to his assistance, but instead of rousing them he was heard by Sverre Rise who was at the Kolpin farm a considerable distance farther away. He came at once, and summoning George Kolpin, Harry was taken to a doctor to have the bones set.