

While using an emery wheel Tuesday, Ed Rhodes was struck in the eye by a piece of flying steel, which lodged in the upper part of the eyeball under the lid. It was necessary to have the particle removed by a physician.