

A recent Los Angeles daily gave an account of an eight months trip, on foot and alone, of Scottie, a collie dog, from the city on the coast, to Tower City North Dakota. The dog had been taken to California by its owner, and almost immediately set out for the old home, a distance of more than 3,000 miles, arriving there shortly before Christmas. The owner of the dog is Floyd E. Runyon, a cousin of C. L. Runyon, well known here, and now a resident of Huntington Park California.
