

A few days ago John E. Sutton caught three boys in the act of making a raid on his apple trees. The same day the writer's tree was stripped while the family was away, 35 apples, our special pride, being taken. This is a dirty trick, no less, after all the care of years in getting the tree to bear, to have them stolen by a bunch of bad boys. These boys are known and their parents should see that their misdeeds are corrected.
