

Roy Wagoner and family came home Wednesday night from their visit in Minnesota. They had a very tough trip home on account of so much snow in the east. He says that from Detroit Lakes to Fargo they saw 500 cars that were stuck in the snow, there often being 25 or more in a row. They were stuck 50 times between the two cities and consider it a miracle that they got through without disaster of some kind. They saw cars that were completely abandoned by the owners who never intended to return for them. When Fargo was reached their troubles were over for the remainder of the journey was like riding on paved roads. Ed Rhodes' who attempted to drive to Pelican Rapids were compelled to turn around at Barnesville and return home.
