

B. N. Howden's and Mrs. Wm. Howden were called to Sanborn last week to attend the funeral of Mrs. E. C. Thompson, who was killed during the storm Tuesday, June 8. She was alone on the place at the time and was out looking after some small chickens when the wind blew a canvas top sleigh over on her. The rig is a light affair, but the force of the blow was evidently very great, for death was instantaneous, according to the opinion of the physician who made the examination. Deceased's husband is a brother of the Howden ladies.
