

While working around his engine at the feed mill Monday, W. A. Adams had his hand caught by the fly wheel and some severe injuries were the result. While no bones were broken, the joints of the hand received such a wrench from the rapidly revolving wheel that he has since been carrying his arm in bandages and sling.