

Last Sunday, little Elois Hafner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hafner, received a severe injury that barely missed being a fatal one. She was chasing chickens out of the garden, using the heavy end of a broken buggy whip for that purpose. While running, she stumbled and fell on the end of the stick which penetrated her abdomen, tearing a deep gash about two inches in length. It happened that the doctor from Wimbledon was at the ball game and he was called to dress the wound and place bandages so the torn parts could unite. At last reports she is getting along very nicely.