

Anton Nelson was cranking a gasoline engine at Roy C. Wagoner's place last Saturday, and when the machine started the crank failed to release. It flew over and clipped the lower part of one ear, almost severing it. He was taken to the Dr's office where the damage was duly repaired and he will soon have as good an ear as ever.