

O. E. Rhodes narrowly escaped a very serious injury last Thursday while cranking the smaller of their tractors. The engine backfired and the heavy iron crank struck him near the right eye, knocking him down and rendering him semi-conscious for a short time. Had the crank struck a half inch farther to the left the eyeball would have been crushed and his eyesight destroyed.