

While helping unload ice for W. H. McCullough Thursday morning Wm. Starr was severely injured. He was standing at the bottom of the chute when three large cakes of ice came down and jammed him against one already at the bottom. It was found that some of the bones in his leg were fractured, and they were set immediately by Dr. Lewis. Mr. Starr will doubtless soon be able to get around again.