

While fixing a manure spreader the first of the week, S. C. Swenson had the misfortune to have his hand badly injured. He had forgotten to throw the spreader out of gear, and while he had his hand in the machinery the horses started up and it was caught by the moving parts, tearing the flesh apart between two of his fingers.