Wesley Thurlow went to Valley City, Saturday evening, where he had a small piece of emery removed from his eye which became embedded there last week while he was in the act of doing some sharpening at the George Laing blacksmith shop. It was not until Saturday the eye became sore and it was soon discovered that it would be necessary to consult an eye specialist. If the eye had been allowed to remain without attention for a few days longer, it would probably have meant the loss of one eye.—
