The Sentinel-Courier published a letter from Maurice Wickham last week in which he says the army life in France as he saw it at that time did not impress him very favorably. Most all of the boys who come back register a kick on the kind of grub they get—not enough of a variety. But one thing is dead sure, they all get fat on it. Fancy foods, which might include pies cakes, cookies, puddings etc are all cut out, the soldiers are given lots of good wholesome exercise and are required to sleep a given number of hours and at the proper time.
