

Dr. T. J. Caldwell was in the city last Monday returning from Barrie, Ontario, where he buried his father, Thomas Caldwell, who died on his claim at Rock Springs, Montana. He was 79 years of age and had been holding down a claim in Montana, he being very active up to the time of his death. The doctor left that evening for Montana, where he will settle up the affairs of his father, after which he will return to Courtenay and again take up his practice at this point.
