

Henry Giese, a laborer, was found dead near a haystack seven miles northwest of Grand Forks on May 11th. The body when found was entirely nude and only the fact that he was a haunchh-back gave the people a clue as to his identity and after describing Giese to the officers; there was no doubt but that the man was Giese.