SKETCH OF LIFE OF MRS. LOHRKE
WHO WAS BURIED IN FARGO
LAST FRIDAY

Edna Lenore Gallivan was born April 8, 1888, at Cleveland, Ohio. She was the daughter of William and Elizabeth Gallivan. Her early life was spent at Cleveland, O., where she pursued her education through the second year of high school work. Later she completed the course at Valley City high school. She was married to Otto A. Lohrke, June 3, 1908, at Courtenay. Mr. and Mrs. Lohrke resided in Courtenay until 1911, when they moved to Cleveland. In 1912 they moved to Williston, where they resided until June, 1912, when they moved to Fargo and settled at the corner of 5th street and 9th avenue north. Mr. Lohrke having been transferred from Williston to Fargo and promoted to his present position as general collector for the J. I. Case Co.

Mrs. Lohrke united with the Congregational church in Valley City, in 1896, while attending the high school. She, with her husband, united with the Congregational church soon after moving there and was an active and devoted member of the church and Ladies Aid society up to the time of leaving the city.

Mrs. Lohrke passed from this life at 4 a. m., July 16, leaving behind besides the grief stricken husband and father, a little daughter, Aileen, and a baby boy, born only a few hours before her departure.

The funeral services were held from the family home at 2 p. m. Friday, July 18, and were conducted by Rev. R. A. Beard, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational church, Fargo, being assisted by Rev. E. S. Shaw, pastor of the Williston church, who brought the sympathy of the church and congregation and of many warm personal friends.

The following relatives and friends were present at the services and assisted in giving all possible comfort in the sad hour: Miss Eliane Bauch and Theodore Lohrke of Lamberton, Minn.;

Mrs. L. J. Cogley, Brookings, S. D., mother, brother and sister of Mr. Lohrke; Harold Gallivan and Mrs. L. D. Benedict of Calgary, brother and sister of Mrs. Lohrke. G. A. Tucker and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard, Miss Eileen Shepard and Paul Skjerseth, all of Courtenay.

In Quarantine

Judge Coffey is confined to his home by a case of what is feared is smallpox and every precaution is being taken to prevent a spread of the disease, if that is what it really is. Where the disease was contracted is the mystery. There have been several cases in the city for several months past and it is hoped that strict quarantine will prevent any further dissemination of it.—Jamestown Capital.

DEATH DUE TO IMAGINATION

Dr. Mary Walker Cites an Instance—
Says Georgia Banker Might Have Been Saved.

I deem it a cruel thing to have insisted that "Mr. Walker must die of poison" when he had lived so long. Dr. Mary Walker writes to the Washington Post.

Had he been a patient of mine I should have declared that he could not die, and proceeded with saving methods. When my father was a medical student the following story was told to him:

A large, stout fellow was awaiting his day to be hanged for murder. Some doctors persuaded the warden of the prison to allow an experiment, promising not to hurt the man, provided the criminal consented.

The doctors told him that they "could bleed him to death, and spare his relatives the ignominy of his being hanged," and he readily consented to die that way.

He was placed upon a table, a tin pan put on the floor at his feet, and another placed high above it with a puncture to let the water out in drops.

The man's eyes were covered and his body fastened to the table and a blunt instrument used to press hard against his foot. Then the water falling in big drops into the pan made the noise that convinced the man that he was being bled.

The doctors talked low about the quantity of blood he might have, and occasionally felt his pulse, and in a whisper stated he would be dead in a few minutes longer, and he did die without one drop of blood having been taken.

Many people have died because of having been told that they must die, when if they had been told that they would not die they would have recovered.
