

While Lewis Menge, 17 year old boy, was discing some land on his father's farm, twelve miles south of Belfield, the four horses he was driving became frightened and ran away. Young Menge was thrown in front of the disc and was terribly cut and mangled that he died three hours later.