

The body of a man was found on the Great Northern tracks, a short distance from Addison, near Casselton. When no one claimed the body, the railroad records disclosed his name as Oscar Ness of Starbuck, Minn. He was on a fast freight with a car of stock and goods going to Williston to settle on a claim.