

School Notes

Last Friday after recess the High School and seventh and eighth grades assembled in the High School room to listen to Mrs. Chamberlain read from a drama by Katrina Trask entitled "In The Vanguard." This book was sent free to the school by the U. S. Commissioner of Education with the request that it be read to the upper grades. It is a strong play, dealing with peace and war—aimed to impress the worst side of war upon the young. It was a rare treat indeed for the school and the play could be easily acted. There is a possibility that in a few weeks the public may have an opportunity of hearing and seeing this very timely drama.

An offer has been made to the grade rooms this week to grant the room a partial holiday on Friday afternoon that is kept the cleanest for this week. A lively contest is on and the result is being eagerly watched. In the meantime a marked improvement in the rooms is noticeable.

The North Dakota Educational Association meets at Bismarck three days next week. An excellent program has been arranged and as this meeting comes at the same time as the Industrial Exposition, it is probable several of our teachers will be in attendance.
