

RECEIVED PATENT—

Charles Genzel of Wimbledon, has received patent papers on a steering device for traction engines to do away with the old fashioned way of steering by hand. The engine will follow the furrow better and do a better job of plowing than can be done by steering by hand. He will no doubt make a good thing out of his patent as it is something that is in general demand and will be snapped up quickly by some of the traction engine companies.