

A Cutting Scrape

The barn dance given in the large new barn being erected by John Stacklowski, west of town, furnished a cutting scene for those in attendance, which occurred some time early Thursday morning.

Arthur Anderson, one of the participants, received four ugly cuts, one in the back of his head, under the left eye, in the back and in the side, the cutting being done by William Jabaski, who used a knife. Both parties are farm laborers, the former being employed on the Hans Nelson farm, and the latter by John Spinarski.

It is not known just how the trouble started as we were not able to locate an eye witness, although there were a large crowd present. Dr. Shepard dressed the wounds. A warrant was sworn out for Jabaski's arrest and Marshall Dick went out to bring his man in, but he in the meantime had, it seems, made good his escape, for he could not be found.
