Broke His Arm

Arthur, son of Henry Larson, who reside north of here, met with a rather painful mishap Sunday morning. He was in the act of cranking an auto and in some manner the engine threw the crank back, it striking his right arm with such force that it was broken near the wrist.

He displayed a great amount of nerve after the accident by cranking the car with his left hand and driving it quite a distance to his home, where help was had and he was brought here where his arm was attended to.
