Editor Klenk, of Courtenay, was in the city Sunday and spent a few hours in our sanctum.

The busiest men in town these days are the elevator men. They have been earning their money this fall and are kept busy until ten and eleven o'clock every night taking care of the golden grain.

About one more week of good weather will just about finish up the threshing in this vicinity. The past two weeks have been ideal for threshing and harvesting and the threshers haven't been slow in taking advantage of it. Wheat is turning out 15 to 20 bushels per acre and oats from 50 to 100. There hasn't been much flax threshed yet and we are not able to say at this time what that crop will yield. Barley has been turning out good and some big yields have been reported.

The Miss Emma and Gertrude Cribbs left Tuesday morning for Jamestown, where they will attend the Jamestown college the coming year.

Henry LaBrash and part of the family have moved up from the lake and are occupying the Tollefson building. The boys will stay at the lake this winter and look after things. Mr. LaBrash will open up a racket and notion store as soon as he can get the goods here. We are glad to welcome this estimable family back to Wimbledon.

Chester Dennstedt arrived in this city Wednesday morning with another bunch of landseekers. Chet seems to be having good luck in convincing those easterners that we have the best state on earth. We sure have the soil and weather conditions and need not exaggerate a bit when he is talking North Dakota to his eastern prospects. We have the goods here and they can easily be shown when they come.

It is estimated that the Jamestown and Northern branch of the Northern Pacific will ship 12,000 cars of grain this fall. Seven thousand cars is the record so far for the best previous year.

Articles of incorporation for the First State Bank of Glenfield, the new town 17 miles north of Courtenay, have been filed with the secretary of state. The incorporators are: H. P. Hammer of Cooperstown, Geo. Berg of Kensal, F. J. Haney of Kensal. The latter will be cashier when the bank opens.

Sam Fosberg, who lives ten miles west of Courtenay, transacted business in the city Monday. He threshed before the big rain. The wheat averaged 90 bushels No. 1, northern an acre and the oats 40 bushels. They have 15 acres of corn which has been cut for feed purposes, it being planted too late to ripen.—Jamestown Daily Capital.

Farmers report that they have secured excellent quantities of seed for next year. Some of those who planted home-grown seed report that the corn ripened earlier and made a better stand than that secured from indifferent imported seed. Some of the corn reached eight and ten feet in height and was going on up when the frost stopped proceedings.
