Gardening is the order of the day.

The hungry fishermen five, Sailed off one evening for the roads were fine,

Bent on getting a good haul Two cars were taken for the room in one would be too small,

Some fished, some walked,
Others wondered and others talked,
The hours crowded the midnight,

But the fishermen kept on more in spite,

For in their number Were two ladies who began to think of slumber.

They knew before they could make the steep ascent,
It a lot of energy meant,

After a long and anxious wait, Here they come for it was the end of the bait.

The steep ascent seemed not so sublime,
For now there was plenty of fish for breakfast time.
