

Moving a large house from the eastern part of Sverdrup township to a point seven miles west of Hannaford last week, W. H. Richardson experienced rather bad luck and a few moments excitement. Some four miles west of town the grade, rather narrow caved in under the load, letting one side of the building down and while Mr. Richardson with three other men worked underneath to raise it the whole building slid off into the grade narrowly missing burying all four. Fortunately, no one was injured, but it took several days to get it back on the trucks and proceeding the rest of the way.
