Cost $1.63 to Raise Bushel of Wheat

According to estimates secured from wheat growers of Foster county in the cost of production meetings held at McHenry and Carrington by the county agent and the farm management department of the agricultural college, the cost of raising a 10-bushel wheat crop was $16.33, or $1.63 per acre on a crop of that yield. These meetings were called by the county agent and those coming from the different parts of the county are no doubt fairly representative of Foster county.

The cost of keeping a work horse, which is not considered by many farmers when calculated from estimates given by these farmers, amounts to about $91 per year. Estimates of this kind are being secured in various counties over the state and form a part of the cost of production studies that are being made by the agricultural college, in addition to the cost account work that is being done with some 160 farmers throughout the state.
