

Hannaford was again visited by an airplane yesterday for the purpose of taking up passengers. Miss Inez Jackson and Harry Westley were the only ones who availed themselves of the opportunity to get a bird's eye view of Hannaford. The airplane was a Fargo machine and was piloted by V. L. Roberts, Oscar Westley accompanying him in the capacity of assistant. From here they went to Walum, and it is reported that while on the way to Wimbledon from Walum with a lady passenger, some engine trouble developed, and in making a forced landing the machine could not be brought to a full stop until it landed in Lake Ensign. The occupants escaped with no further harm than a wetting, but the airplane sustained a broken propellor.
