
LUELLE STERING LAID TO REST

The following clipping is taken from a Stamwood, Wash., newspaper, and relates about the death of a niece of the Enterprise editor:

Luella Stering, eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stering, died in the Everett Providence hospital Friday evening following an aggravated attack of appendicitis. Miss Stering has been one of the most popular and most admired young women of the community. Of her cheery disposition and great-heartedness her friends cannot say too much.

The girl would have been nineteen years old on the nineteenth of March. She is survived by the parents and by four brothers, all of whom make their home in East Stamwood.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from the Lutheran Free church with Rev. A. O. Kolden in the pulpit, and interment took place in the Anderson cemetery.

One of the most beautiful of floral pieces was given by the Jolly Glee club, of which Miss Stering was a member.
