

But for quick presence of mind and agility of movement A. D. Anderson would now be nursing a badly bruised body. In rolling a heavy cask down a stairway Wednesday afternoon the passageway became clogged and to clear it Mr. Anderson stepped in front of the barrel. Suddenly the clearing was made and like a flash the barrel rolled down the steep incline towards Mr. Anderson. A headlong dash sideways was all that saved him. As it was the huge cask rolled over his left foot badly bruising the tendons and causing him to be incapacitated from work for a short while.
