Miss Lulu Blegan, who was formerly telephone operator at the local exchange, has recently been made chief operator at the Hannaford office.

George Schmidt and family were passengers to McHenry on Tuesday. Mr. Schmidt went up to the end of the line to look over the agent's job with a possibility in view of accepting a transfer to that point.

The first freeze of the fall came in this section Monday night. Some report an inch of ice. Wednesday was still colder, and as a result the coal men are being kept busy.

A passenger coach of regulation size has been running on the local train the past week. Conductor Lawrence informs us that it is only temporary however--while the "old-timer" is being repaired.

A new directory for the local telephone company is being printed in the Commercial shop. It will be placed in the hands of the patrons some time next week.

Another week of idleness for the threshers. Just about the time most of the machines were ready to begin operations, another rain Sunday. This was followed by another shower Monday and again Tuesday evening. Most of the rigs started again yesterday, and, from indications which come from the temperature, it is generally believed that there will be a few days at least to continue operation.
