
Still Stealing Church Bells

Last week two church bells were stolen from churches near New Rockford; one from the Grandfield Norwegian Lutheran church and one from the alhalla Norwegian Lutheran church. The band is evidently operating with a couple of autos, one of them containing an oxyacetylene plant with which to junk the metal up into small pieces rapidly and without making any noise. It is then taken to points on the state line, shipped to confederates in the cities, who dispose of it at a splendid profit.
