

B. M. Lunde met with an accident last Tuesday evening that for a time was feared might have very serious results, as he was unconscious for about six hours. He had been to the depot to get a trunk for his sister, Anna, who was returning home from Courtenay where she had been teaching school. The trunk was placed in the back seat of the auto and some other things from the store placed on top of the trunk. Miss Lunde, who was driving the car, was in the front seat with her mother, and Mr. Lunde was standing on the running board. While driving from the Mercantile store to the Lunde home a jar of butter standing on the top of the trunk in the back seat started to slide off and Lunde reached out to recover it. He was facing in the opposite direction to which the car was running, when he lost his balance and had to jump off the running board. He fell in such a manner as to strike his head heavily against the ground, rendering him unconscious in which condition he remained until about midnight. Drs. Benson and Westley were called and all aid possible was given him. No bones were broken and at the present time he is up and again attending to his duties though still somewhat weak after his accident.
