

G. K. Ness left last Wednesday for Grace City to take up the work as editor of The Gazette. The Gazette has passed through many vicissitudes the past few years, and it is to be hoped that Editor Ness will be able to outwit the hoodoo which seems to have been on the trail of that paper ever since its inception. If hard work and a natural inclination for newspaper work will do it, we predict that Grace City will from now on have a newspaper that any town of its size might well be proud of; but if financial entanglements and factional jealousies are allowed to interfere with the welfare of the publication, then the town does not deserve to have a newspaper.
