

Sentinel-Courier: August Tosterud, 35 years old, separator man on the Feske threshing rig, 12 miles southwest of here, was the victim of an unfortunate accident last Thursday. When starting the rig in the morning, he was adjusting a chain on the separator and in some manner his glove became entangled in the chain, pulling his hand over the sprocket and terribly lacerating the fingers. The little finger was practically cut off and the middle fingers badly cut and bruised. He was brought to town and Dr. Brimi dressed the wounded hand, amputating the little finger at the hand and sewing up the other bruised fingers.
