

Matt Haugen recently received word from the Government that his brother Oscar had died in France, Feb. 27th, of bronchial pneumonia. A letter written by Oscar Feb. 22nd stated that he was well and glad that he had passed successfully through so much hard fighting, and he was looking forward to his speedy return home; yet five days later he died. Oscar left here to enlist at the same time as Lewis Swingen and Alex Armstrong, and had participated in some of the fiercest fighting of the war.