

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Andina Kalland, Editor-in-Chief
Front seat to let. In good order.
See Lydia Thoreson, Fifth Row.

Wanted—A stenographer for writing notes. Apply to Dorothy Angus.

Question: Where is the most vegetation? Lydia: At the North Pole.

A dimple on the chin and a dimple within. Noted Persons Eleanora and Rachel.

Lost—one of the sharks in Ancient History. Finder please return to the Class.

Wanted—Amusement during English III period. Pulling half preferred. Apply to Mildred Peterson.

The following was heard one day in General Science Class: Question. Pain as a danger signal. Kermit. Time to see a doctor.

The members of the Physics Class tried to escape the horrible trials of class one day by hiding in the attic. Their joys lasted no longer than ten minutes for Mr. Ward discovered their line of retreat.

The Freshmen English Class is now learning to measure poetry by feet and not by verse. Some of them wear a No. 8 shoe and find it a rather difficult undertaking.

Two members of the High School were guests at an Announcement Dinner given in their honor last evening. Several members of the Faculty were present. The dining room was elaborately decorated with pink flowers, the chairs of the guests of honor being indicated by huge bows of ribbon. A hidden orchestra rendered an exquisite program of appropriate music.

Last Friday, being Arbor Day, we spent part of the forenoon cleaning the yard. At 11:30 we marched back to the Assembly Room bearing, as trophies of our labor, blistered hands, dirty clothes and sun-burned faces. We were excused at noon feeling that we had truly earned a half holiday.