

An airplane passed over the village twice last week. The aviator was Ed McElligot who went from Fargo to New Rockford to give exhibitions Friday at the Soldiers Homecoming celebration in that city. Several of the residents of the village saw and heard the birdman Saturday morning on his way back to Fargo, and reported that he was traveling at a height of only two or three hundred feet. This is undoubtedly the first airplane that has ever flown over Hannaford, but in a few years it is predicted that they will be so numerous that people will hardly bother to look up when they pass.
