

Letter From Milton Mills

Some time ago, The Enterprise had the pleasure of printing a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Milton E. Mills, telling about their trip from Villa Grove, Ill., to New York State. Herewith is another letter from Mr. Mills telling about the many interesting sights seen on the remainder of their trip:

As we have arrived in Illinois after the last half of our journey, we will give our experiences. We left Kjeldgaard's on Tuesday, Oct. 7th, leaving the folks all well. They had just started to harvest a bumper crop of barley, and had 24 acres of potatoes to dig. We traveled down along the Hudson River, past Mat-tawan where Harry Thaw is congn-ed, through the Catskill Mountains where Rip Van Winkle took his long sleep. We stopped at Suffern on Tuesday night. The next morning we started for Irvington, N. J. When we were out of Suffern about ten miles we saw the airplanes go over us on their way from Mineola, N. Y. for San Francisco. They sure were traveling at a great speed. We stopped in Irvington, N. J. and visited our aunt and uncle for a week.

We left Irvington on Oct. 15th and arrived at Philadelphia that night. Say that Quaker City is sure laid out right. Main streets 130 feet wide. Light down the center and no street cars allowed to run. Four autos can run abreast on each side with room to spare. The next day we arrived at Washington, D. C. and stayed two nights and a day there seeing the sights. That sure is a great city for sights. The only plot of ground in the U. S. that has taxation without representation. Nobody is allowed to vote in the District of Columbia. We took a sight-seeing auto trip in the city in the forenoon. The first building was the Bureau of Engraving where they make all the paper money, bonds, Philippino money, postage stamps, revenue stamps, etc. They print the amount of $4,500,000 in money alone every day, and destroy $200,000 worth of paper money each day. The building alone cost $3,250,000. We next visited the new National
