

With this issue the Enterprise enters upon its seventeenth year. For fifteen years the present owner has been connected with the paper, and until last fall did all the mechanical work connected with getting out the paper, practically single-handed. Since October, of last year, Mr. G. K. Ness has been associated with us, and with his assistance the paper has grown in size and circulation so that now our regular issue consists of ten pages with an occasional twelve page issue. We have at all times devoted our best efforts to getting out the best paper possible under present circumstances, and we aim to make further improvements as rapidly as our expanding business warrants.
