Saving money is very much like getting married, easier after you have made the start than you thought it would be. Many hesitate to marry because they fear their ability to live up to the expectations of some good woman, and in many cases their fears are well grounded. So, too, many men and women earning fair incomes delay starting a savings account, fearing they may not be able to keep it up regularly, when the truth is, that the start is the very strongest possible incentive to continue and once the account is opened it is surprising how it grows, and how much joy there is in going without many things you formerly thought you really must have in order to see that bank account grow.
