

Julius Westley returned Saturday to his duties as a member of the band on the U. S. S. North Carolina after a week's visit at home. Since Julius was assigned to the North Carolina that ship has made seven trips across the Atlantic convoying transports. When the transports approach the European coast they are met by destroyers and conducted into port while the North Carolina and other convoys return to the United States, so Julius has not yet had an opportunity to see the sights on foreign shores.
