Lisbon Star: "A Wisconsin paper proposes the conundrum: 'Why do so many people go to Dakota?' There are a good many satisfactory answers to this but a writer puts it in this sensible way: Why do they come? Because we have the finest body of agricultural lands in the world. Because these lands can be obtained at a nominal price, or simply by settlement and cultivation. Because the climate is salubrious and healthy, the atmosphere dry and invigorating and the waters pure and sparkling. Because the capitalist can find here the most inviting opportunities for the investment of his capital, the tradesman finds openings for his business, and the laborer lucrative employment. Because they can settle here among a class of thrifty, energetic American farmers from the most prosperous northern states. Because they can have the advantages of church and school privileges and of the most of the luxuries which they enjoyed in their old homes. Because the laws of the territory are liberal and framed alike for the rich and poor.
