Tin Discovered in Dakota.

Under prominent head lines the Denver Tribune announces the finding of tin ore in large quantities in Dakota by these remarks:

"For the first time in the history of the United States tin has been discovered in large quantities. There are few who are acquainted with the details of the affair, and these have been kept as quiet as possible. Efforts have been made for many years to discover this valuable mineral in this country, and notwithstanding the fact that this mineral has been claimed to have been discovered, investigation has proved the reports to be untrue. A little tin, it is said, has been found in Wisconsin, but this is doubted by mining experts, as they think that some of the mines where it was claimed this mineral was alleged to have been found were 'salted' by the Cornwall miners who came to this country.

The finding of tin in large quantities, to which this article refers, was not in Colorado, but in Dakota, and if the expectations of the parties interested only prove true a general rush is expected in that direction. Some time ago a gentleman who is a friend of Mr. Benjamin D. Spencer, a broker of this city, was prospecting in Dakota in the neighborhood of Harney's Peak, which is named in honor of Gen. Harney. At length a piece of property was located and the development was begun. Mica in large quantities was found, but as the development was proceeded with, this partially gave out and tin took its place. Mr. Spencer was at once communicated with, and some of the ore was forwarded to him for the purpose of having it assayed. He broke the ore in half, and gave a portion of it to Mr. E. E. Burlingame to have assayed. Mr. Spencer kept a portion of the ore for the reason that the reports of the discovery of tin had often been made before, and that if the assay developed the fact that the ore was tin ore, he could at once go to Dakota and compare the mineral sent him with that in the mine from which it had been said it was taken.

ORE IN LARGE QUANTITIES.
Mr. Burlingame, of Denver, assayed the specimen given to him for that purpose and found that it ran well in tin with little copper. He reported the result of his labor to Mr. Spencer, and that gentleman at once started for Dakota. He remained there for some time and returned to the city a few days ago."

The Republican gives a lengthy interview with Mr. Spencer and that gentleman asserts emphatically that tin ore has been discovered in much larger quantities than ever before in the country, and makes known plans of future development. The discovery of tin in Dakota's precincts simply adds to her unlimited and varied resources.
