Squatters' Rights.

Mr. G. B. Coburn, Special Agent Government Land Department, was interviewed by a Devil's Lake Pioneer Press scribe and among other things uttered the following:

"I have heard it declared that the first settler on unsurveyed land could locate his land in any direction from his dwelling without reference to the claims of later settlers, provided the forty-acre tracts are contiguous. This is an error and the reason for it is very apparent when we examine the number of forty-acre tracts which would be in a state of uncertainty until said first settler had made his selection. The number of different combinations of four contiguous forty-acre tracts, taking a given one each time, is very large. It is true that the oldest qualified settler has the prior right under the pre-emption and homestead laws, but only to the tract claimed by him, the boundaries of which are plainly defined, or the extent of the claim otherwise made notorious, so that a later comer by the use of due diligence may have proper warning. There is no law by which a settler on unsurveyed land can hold a greater area than a quarter section, hence he who plows a furrow around a tract containing from two hundred to six hundred acres, has no properly defined boundaries, and runs a risk of losing all except the forty-acre tract upon which his dwelling stands."

Miss Millie Hewitt, who came here and took up a claim in the spring, has returned from a western trip and built upon her land. Miss Hewitt is not of necessity driven to this step, as she is a daughter of J. L. Hewitt, an extensive and wealthy farmer of Wisconsin. But, as many others, she likes the fascination of the wild west. Such brave and courageous girls certainly deserve great praise. —Dawson Globe.
