TREE-PLANTING.

Practical Hints from a Practical Tree-Grower on Tree-Culture on Dakota Prairies.

Mr. Jerry Collins, in the Jamestown Capital gives the following practical suggestions on tree-culture:

I offer my experience for what it is worth, knowing well that every pig will go to the trough and try the swill for himself.

But first let me say, if you are not prepared to get at your tree planting in the right way don't have anything to do with it, else you will have to do your work over several times, and for a man who has to open a farm at the same time it is no fun.

First—Kind of trees to plant. Cottonwood, and box elder trees, not over two feet high, not less than one foot. That is variety enough for a year or two. Then, if some of the trees fail to grow, they can be replanted with white ash, white willow cuttings, or any good timber tree you can get. It will do to plant alternate rows of different kinds, or parts of rows. Bear in mind that expedition in the work is a prime necessity. You cannot afford to run about the field dropping a tree here and there.

Second—Right time to plant. In May and October and first ten days in November. The surest way is to plant seedling trees, one or two feet; don't take any stock in the age of a tree.

Third—How to prepare the ground. That is where the most of the planters break their backs. They are afraid to do too much. In this case the best is the cheapest, if you are going to keep the weeds down. Of course your land has been broken and backset, and the stones got off. If not, do it first. Then smooth your land with a heavy harrow. Next (early in May, while the ground is soft) take three horses and a sulky plow, and plow your land over again, six inches deep, or as deep as the team will stand it and do their work. Next harrow the ground well, and before it gets very dry, going over it, say six times. Then take your three horses and sulky plow, cant the plow and run furrows, four feet apart, the length of the field, just as you would mark out your ground for potatoes, only go as deep as you can, so that the plow will clear itself.

Haul your trees on to the field and put a few bunches in a furrow close together in different parts of the field. Cover the roots and when planting only take up two bunches at a time, so as not to expose the roots to the sun and wind. It pays to have a boy drop the trees; let him practice so as to step off four feet at a time (two steps) drop his tree, and keep going. An active boy can drop trees as fast as two men can cover them. The planters follow with hoes. Two good strokes of the hoe, a stamp of the hoe as you go along, and the tree is planted. It should have four inches of earth over the roots, and then well pressed down. Cottonwood trees can be planted faster than box elder, because the roots do not spread so much when they are small. Trees to stand 4x4 feet will require 2,700 per acre. Seeds are too risky to plant. Better get the young trees. It is worth as much to dig up and gather seedlings from the seed bed as it will cost to buy the young trees. The willow cuttings may be used to some advantage, but I do not take much stock in them except for wind breaks about the house and barns. The young trees may be had at Bismarck, Valley City and other places.

In dropping and covering the trees, set them in the furrow, bottom against the land side or steeper side of the furrow and draw the earth to the tree against that. Never mind if the trees lean away, they will come straight.

In following the surface will be thrown into ridges and hollows. But when you run the cultivator over it the first time that will be smoothed off and the furrows filled.

One man and horse can cultivate five acres twice in a row in six hours. When the trees are set deep as directed, it will take a very good cultivator to touch the roots.

An eastern contemporary contains an article headed: "Our Bank Account." It contains but four lines. We didn't read it. It isn't right to pry into other people's business.

A Boston man recently died from the effects of eating too many cloves. What a warning this should be to you, young man. Let us plead with you to in the future avoid the deadly clove and use burnt coffee.

At a station in Montana the other day a Boston girl stuck her head out of a Northern Pacific car and exclaimed: "The bewildering womanhood which crowns this transcendental scenewy with such indescribable fascination and tinges its every feath with such overpowering interest quite bweaks me up!" And a number of members of the local vigilance committee standing on the platform looked grimly into each other's faces and muttered: "Oh! if it was only a man!"

AMERICAN FARMER
FREE TO ALL OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

All of our subscribers who will pay their subscription accounts to this paper in full to date, and one year in advance, will be presented with one year's subscription to the a sixteen page agricultural magazine, published by E. A. K. Hackett, at Fort Wayne, Indiana, and which is rapidly taking rank as one of the leading agricultural publications of the country. It is devoted exclusively to the interests of the Farmer, Stock Breeder, Dairyman, Gardener, and their Household, and every species of industry connected with that great portion of the people of the world, the Farmer. The subscription price is $1.00 per year. Farmers cannot well get along without it. It puts new ideas into their minds. It teaches them how to farm with profit to themselves. It makes the home happy, the young folks cheerful, the greater contentment, the showiest happy, and the demagogue hoarse.
