

Prince Bismarck's Position.
It has been recently announced that Prince Bismarck has retired from the head of the Prussian Ministry, and will henceforth devote himself exclusively to the duties of the German Chancellorship.

In order to understand this change of official position, we must remember that Prussia, though the principal state, is only one of nearly thirty states which, combined, form the German Empire. That empire is like the United States in this respect, that it consists of a number of states, each with its local government, which for their common and general interests, are united in a central system.

Before the German Empire was established, as a result of the Franco-German war of 1870, there was no such common political bond between all the German states. When the Empire came into existence, Prince Bismarck was made its Chancellor, or principal executive officer under the Emperor.

But he had already been the Prussian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the head of the Prussian Cabinet since 1862. He retained this office, and added to it the larger and higher office of Chancellor. He has thus, for fourteen years, carried the burden of these two offices, conducting both the local affairs of the Russian Kingdom and the broader policy of the German Empire.

At the age of sixty-nine, and with far from robust health, he now risks himself of the cares, perplexities and annoyances of the less important post, and will confine his energies to the interests of the imperial government, which are more to his taste.

His duties as Prussian Minister compelled him to settle the details of measures and administrative acts applicable to the kingdom alone. His duties as Chancellor are, in the main, the broader ones of guiding the foreign policy of Germany, and directing the relations of Germany with foreign powers.

Prince Bismarck's public career has extended over a period of nearly forty years. He entered public life as a diplomatist, and was Prussia's representative successively at Frankfurt, Vienna, St. Petersburg and Paris. During the twenty-two years that he has been at the head of the Prussian ministry, he has accomplished greater things as a statesman than has any other man of his time.

It was he who, step by step, carried the power of Prussia from that of a kingdom of the second rank to the height of European ascendancy. His was the bold spirit which inspired the wars with Denmark, Austria and France, each of which added to Prussian influence and glory; and to him, more than to any other, was due the successful revival of the German Empire.

When he became the head of the Prussian ministry, Austria was the leader of Germany, although the States were independent. He first broke the power of Austria, then organized the North German Confederation, and finally brought all the states of both North and South Germany, excepting Austria, into a single Empire, with Prussia at its head.

But in glancing over this long and conquering career, we cannot fail to remark that while Bismarck has done everything to make Prussia and Germany great and strong, he has done little or nothing for the political advancement of the German people.

Even when he had nominally belonged to and led the so-called social party, he has always been despotic and aristocratic in his opinions and his policy. He has been a devoted servant of the crown, and has in every way striven to strengthen and to increase its prerogatives. This has been a comparatively easy task for him, since the respect and love of the Germans for their old Emperor is almost unbounded.

It may be well, therefore, that Bismarck's retirement from the Prussian ministry will leave the way open for more liberal statesmen in that kingdom to propose and carry reforms which will give the people a larger share in, and enable them to exercise a more direct and potent influence on the government of the country.

Similarity of Names.
One of the odd things in a great city is the number of people who have similar names, from which amusing and often annoying experience are apt to result. To say nothing of John Smith, when one John Brown or William Robinson gets married, dozens of other John Browns or William Robinsons receive letters of congratulation, and if one of the names applies for a divorce, all the others wonder if the applicant is the man they knew. This is the time the wives of such gentlemen receive numerous calls from their friends, all of whom think of course, it could not possibly be their acquaintance, but that they will feel more comfortable if they go and see about it. It may even happen that a very prominent citizen who never took a pin from any one, or could bring himself to kill a fly, takes up his morning newspaper, and reads his own name as one associated with burglary or suspected of murder, and it may be assumed that the paragraph would make him feel decidedly uncomfortable. Then it is he realizes what is a name, and thinks he would prefer the perfume of the felony to be attached to some other than his own.—Traggart's Philadelphia Times.

The Grand Lodge A. O. U. W.
The grand lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen convened at Workmen hall, St. Paul, on Tuesday, the 6th. There were 150 present, representing 87 different lodges. The jurisdiction of the grand lodge comprises Minnesota, Dakota and Manitoba. Of the representatives, eight were from Dakota, one from Manitoba and the balance from Minnesota. The business of the day was the consideration of reports presented by the grand medical director, grand master workman, grand recorder, grand receiver and grand treasurer from the supreme lodge. There were at the last meeting of this lodge 3,039 members, out of which number twenty have died. There has been $40,000 insurance paid during the year. The expense of collecting and disbursing this money $4,000, and the expense for the year to each member, $15.

An appropriation was made for a deputy to visit lodges in the jurisdiction for the purpose of increasing the membership. No special effort will be made the ensuing year to increase the number of lodges, it being considered advisable to concentrate all efforts to increase the membership in the established ones. It was decided that under the constitution members over fifty years old cannot be received into this, from another jurisdiction. Grand lodges of other jurisdictions have decided this point adversely. The grand representatives to the supreme lodge were instructed to urge a graded assessment according to age. An effort was made to make a graded initiation fee, ranging from $3 to $25, according to age, but this failed. The capitation tax for the ensuing year at $1 for each member. The expenses of this session were $911.

Following is the list of grand officers elected for the ensuing year:
Grand Master Workman, D. E. Vance of Wisconsin; grand foreman, E. H. Stevens, St. Paul; grand overseer, A. J. Blessor of Milbank, Dak.; grand recorder, William Cheney, Minneapolis; grand receiver, J. J. McCarty of St. Paul; grand guide, H. J. Birch of Wadena; grand watchman, J. J. Giddings of Anoka; grand trustee, J. F. Foun of Minneapolis; past master workman, C. H. Roberts of Rochester; representatives to supreme lodge, C. H. Roberts of Rochester, A. L. Levi of Minneapolis, J. M. Nye of Wells; financial director, Talbot Jones of St. Paul; finance committee, D. Ramaly, Monroe, Shire, G. W. Thayer, Lake City; judiciary committee, L. Van Slyke of Hastings, A. H. Talsey of Donnelly, F. F. Wild of St. Paul.

The lodge adjourned to meet again at the same place on the first Tuesday in May, 1885, at 10 o'clock a. m.

A Sensational Murder Case in England.
London Special cable: A terrible tragedy in high life is reported from Devonshire. Mr. Hugh Shortland, a rich barrister from Australia, had been spending the past few months in that county enjoying a vacation. He made the acquaintance of a Miss Dimes, the daughter of a wealthy country gentleman and connected with some of the most aristocratic families, and proposed marriage to her. Mr. Dimes, however, objected to Shortland's attentions, having heard some disreputable stories about his habits, which Mr. Dimes was convinced were too much those of a dissolute and profligate. Shortland, being eleven years and skilled in intrigue, managed to induce Mr. Dimes to postpone a final decision until he could be convinced that his impressions were erroneous and thus maintained his entree at the residence. Taking advantage of the opportunities afforded by his probation, the Australian pressed his suit with the young lady, and finally induced her to elope with him, and they were duly married. Soon after eloping, the young lady's dead body was found in a pond on her father's estate. At about the time the body was discovered, Shortland was reported to be in the county. It was generally supposed, therefore, that Mrs. Shortland had committed suicide in a fit of despondency. This view was confirmed by a letter which was received from Shortland soon after the finding of the body. An investigation was begun and it was soon ascertained that Shortland had never left England at all since his marriage, and that he had written his letter and sent it under cover to a friend at Bristol. Shortland was promptly arrested, and his trial promises to be one of the most sensational in English criminal records. All efforts to find a reason for the murder have failed, and Shortland refuses to make any utterance on the subject.

For the Aid of Gen. Grant.
Washington Special.—Senator Edmunds left the chair of the vice president Wednesday to offer a bill to place Gen. Grant on the retired list of the army, and in a brief speech alluded indirectly to his financial failure, which was announced in the papers. He said he hoped the committee on military affairs would hasten the passage of the bill. Such a measure has been repeatedly introduced in congress, but has invariably failed. Southern democrats, especially ex-confederates, are kindly disposed toward Grant, and little opposition is anticipated beyond that of democrats of the Holman type in the house, and Voorhees type in the senate. While it is well known that Grant has a comfortable fortune left, there is a general feeling that his services deserve the providing of him against the ups and downs of commercial business.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.
I am a Baptist Minister and before I even thought of being a clergyman I graduated in medicine but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago, I was for many years a sufferer from Quinsy, "Thomas Electric Oil cured me." I was also troubled with Hoarseness and Thomas Electric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had Diphtheria, and "Thomas Electric Oil cured them" and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten, I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate Cold, or Cough and if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the Oil and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can until the Oil falls over into the throat and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their Catarrh. For deafness and Earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicine that I have ever felt like recommending and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration, I am now suffering with a pain like Rheumatism in my right limb and nothing relieves me like Thomas Electric Oil.
